Come Paint the Countryside!

Renowned landscape painter, Gene Costanza joins Roger Dale Brown in a five day workshop in Newnan at Spring Horse Farm.

This is an intensive workshop designed for the beginning/ moderate artist to the professional. Instructional work is designed for each experience level. This is a class on how to paint on location landscape and to capture the true essence of the subject. There will be personal instruction and class exercises to demonstrate how to build a solid foundation in one's painting. Painting, color mixing, demonstration and slide presentation will also be included.
GET READY TO WORK!

"I strive for a unique sense of design, balance and rhythm, interrupted by breaking the rules a little to give a slight sense of unease is what I look for in many of my paintings. This piece has morning fog lifting over the marshland with those wonderful southern pines now coming into view. The piece has a lot of green in it ... very hard to paint in greens and one has to manage that."

-Gene Costanza

WORKSHOP NOTES:

As you can see from the above, I think composition and what I like to call DESIGN, is the first and most important aspect of a good painting. Once the basic skill sets have been grasped, one wants to produce something that stands on it's own as a work of art. We will do exercises to enhance our seeing a design in the "overloaded property room" of the outdoors, as Carlson said. We will endeavor to spend as much time as possible one on one.
